

CHRISTINE MUMMA ATTORNEY GENERAL

Conservative
for Attorney
General

Christine Mumma is a public service attorney, a former businesswoman, a mom who went to law school when she had three young children, and a political outsider running for Attorney General.

- Spent nearly a decade in business management and finance before going back to law school
- Clerked for renowned Conservative Supreme Court Justice I. Beverly Lake, Jr.
- Co-founded the groundbreaking NC Innocence Inquiry Commission
- Executive Director of the NC Center on Actual Innocence
- Represented and exonerated 9 innocent men who were wrongly convicted
- Helped law enforcement find murderers and rapists who had gone free
- Won the News & Observer's Tarheel of the Year award, the Defender of Justice Award, Nancy Susan Reynolds Award for Advocacy, Thurgood Marshall Award, Women of Justice Public Service Practitioner Award, and Business Leader Media Pro Bono Impact Award.

Christine is one of three candidates seeking the Republican nomination for Attorney General in the upcoming March 3rd primary. She's the best candidate to take on Josh Stein in the fall. Christine put $250,000 of her own money into the campaign, and after raising an additional $100,000 in the first few weeks of the campaign, she's off to a strong start.

Statewide campaigns are increasingly expensive, especially with a competitive Democratic presidential primary driving up campaign costs in North Carolina. Christine needs to raise $500,000 to win the March 3rd primary.
